

JOIN US FOR A LISTENING SESSION

The Washington State Board of Health wants to hear from you!

Washington State's Local Boards of Health are responsible for protecting the health of people within their communities.

Local Boards of Health oversee local health departments, enforce state public health laws, and set public health priorities.

The Washington State Board of Health is writing the rules (246-90 WAC) to implement a new state law to include community members on local boards of health.

If you could write the rules, what requirements would you make for people who want to apply to be on a Local Board of Health?

What would make serving on a Local Board of Health accessible for you or your community?
